

TRAVEL WITH NARPO

First of all MERRY Christmas, yes scary that it's that time already but the next TRAVEL With NARPO will be in 2016

(unless you get the eshots of course) I've had a brilliant time helping you and the positive feedback has meant a lot, thank you. Quite a few NARPO Members have exciting trips already planned for 2016.....

ALSO I was delighted to win 2 awards at our National Conference last week.

I've had a few people query "where can we go that's safe" Well it's a sad fact that the likes of Tunisia is now out of bounds and there are issues with Egypt, Turkey and Greece that put a lot of people off going, even though you can still travel.

This puts more pressure on the availability and prices in Spain, where its possible for a family to go to CUBA cheaper than Spain!

Did you know that Royal Caribbean are offering £25 deposits on a lot of their cruises right now?

Some include tips and drinks.....

Dubrovnik

There really is no debate as to whether you should visit Dubrovnik during your time in Croatia. To us, Dubrovnik is essential in gaining an insight to Croatian life, cuisine and culture. You can visit this city time & time again; the magic never seems to fade.

Split

As the second largest city in Croatia, Split has an awful lot to offer when it comes to food and drink, sights and attractions, shopping and culture. It has a rich history dating back to the Roman Diocletian Empire and today it features an interesting mix of beautiful architecture and ruins.

Cavtat

If you're looking to escape the busy streets of Dubrovnik, head a few miles south to the centre of the Konavle municipality, to the quaint town of Cavtat. Set along the Adriatic coast, this stunning harbour features a traditional kind of charm & incredible views.

Hvar

Hvar is a stunning island – also birthplace of the white stone which built Diocletian's Palace – is a little piece of Croatian paradise. And visitors will find everything from great food and drink plus a pretty decent nightlife to the most wonderful natural surroundings.
